Problem description

1.The law requires local crews, but there aren’t enough people. Since January 1, 2025, command positions on Kazakh-flagged ships must be held by citizens of Kazakhstan. KMTF admits it is not yet possible to fully staff ships with Kazakhstani specialists. Citizens make up 72% of KMTF employees and 60% of its command staff.

2. Vacancies take weeks to fill. Seafarers are found through acquaintances and phone calls. There is no single database showing who is available, what certificates they hold, and when they can join a ship. Meanwhile the vessel sails short-handed or sits idle.

3. General job platforms don’t fit. hh.kz has no fields for what matters at sea: certificate of competency, STCW, experience by vessel type, document expiry dates, sea/shore rotations. Recruiters check everything manually.

Solution

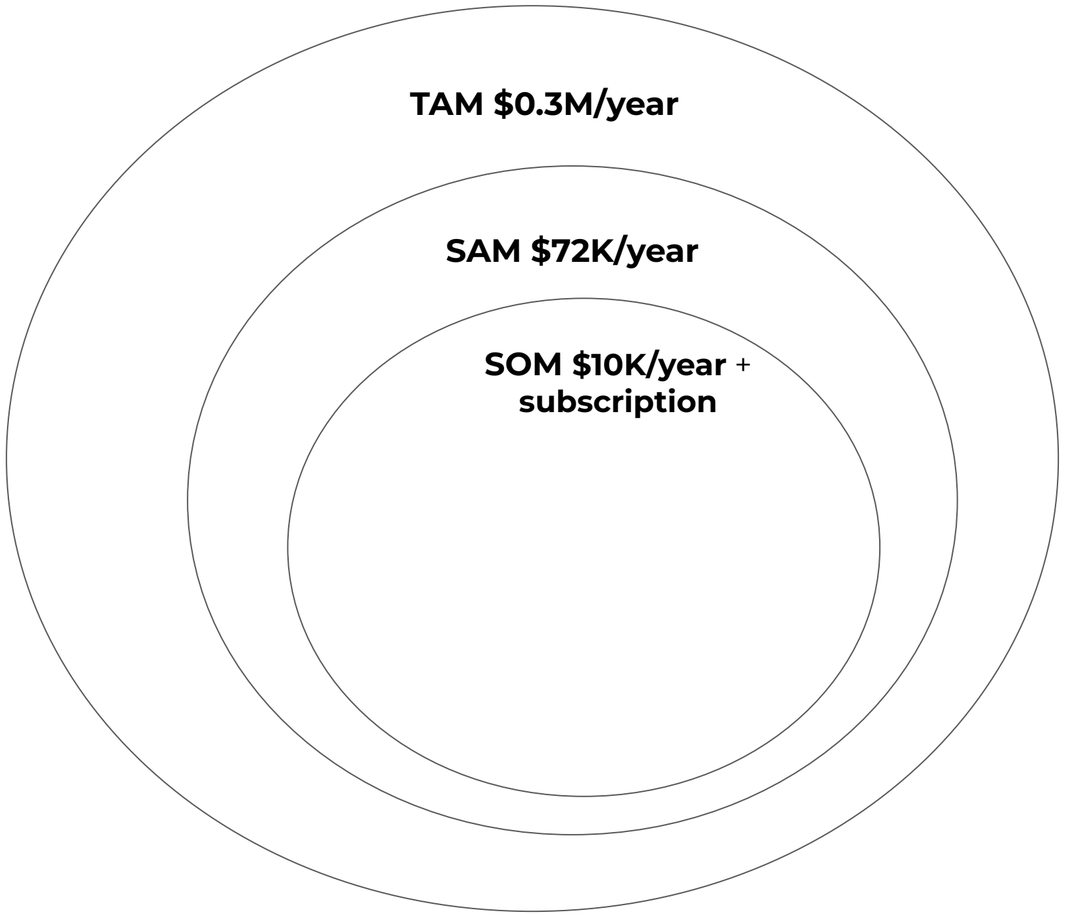

Crew.kz helps Kazakhstani shipping companies and seafarers solve slow, manual crew recruitment and document checking with a specialized platform: seafarer profiles, verified certificates, and matching by rank and vessel type.

Business model

The employer pays and seafarers use the platform for free. This also follows international rules: the MLC convention sets the “employer pays” principle and prohibits charging recruitment fees to seafarers.

Average check: $500 per hire. For reference, in a Mission to Seafarers survey, seafarers paid intermediaries $1,800 on average, ranging from $100 to $7,500. That practice is illegal, and our model replaces it

Traction progress

Roadmap Vision

Step 1

MVP launch. Seafarer profiles, document verification, company database.

Step 2

Pilot. 1–2 Caspian companies, first crews placed, measure time-to-fill vacancies before and after.

Step 3

Monetization and services. Placement fee and subscription, document reminders, directory of courses and medical clinics.

Expansion. Other Caspian countries, offshore and river fleet, Kazakhstani crews on international vessels.

Contacts

We came to validate the idea with real industry players and turn it from a researched concept into a working pilot. We have already interviewed deck officers and engineers in Aktau and studied the crew-nationality law and the staffing situation at KMTF. Now we need partners and support to take the next step.
